

SCOTLAND
FINTECH
FESTIVAL

16 September - 15 October 2021

A festival of conferences and meet ups celebrating how financial innovation, collaboration and inclusion across the nation are creating a thriving fintech economy in Scotland and a global fintech cluster.

#SCOTLAND|SNOW

Introduction

Welcome to Scotland's Fintech Festival. This is the fourth year of annual celebrations that brings together all those committed to fintech innovation here in Scotland and around the world thanks to the inspiring fintech community, strategic partners and international colleagues.

This year, as we continue to emerge from the pandemic, we're looking forward to celebrating the successes, resilience, and the determination from fintech innovators in supporting us all as we start towards economic recovery and building back better following the impact of COVID-19. We continue to hold inclusion firmly in our eye as we set our sights on the future and its potential. Many of the festival events and activities will continue to be delivered digitally. We are embracing the lessons and successes from last year, engaging global audiences, sharing innovation and experiences, and capturing the new ways of working that have been advantageous for many people over the last 18 months in particular.

We will however have an opportunity to meet face to face, returning with a small number of physical locations as we kick off the festival with the DIGIT Fintech Summit in Edinburgh and conclude with an event produced by Canongate Communications, in association with The Times Scotland in Glasgow. The combination of virtual and physical events provides us with a unique blend that reflects the blended ways of working many continue to experience.

We're seeing this experience across the innovative fintech community and cluster across Scotland, which is maintaining momentum despite the continued economic and social uncertainty. The challenges of the pandemic have driven an accelerated adoption of fintech innovation, reflecting the outcomes focused purpose of fintech entrepreneurs and SMEs.

This year's festival will offer many occasions for the SME firms in the community to share their innovative propositions as well as the collaborative approach to reinventing the financial world and more. Their innovation, ambition and determination continue to inspire us all. We continue to appreciate the valuable engagement and collaboration of our strategic partners, committed cluster participants, colleagues and friends in hosting events on such a broad range of themes.

During the festival you'll hear from, fintech firms, consumer groups, regulators, student associations, universities, financial firms, global enterprises, government bodies and many others from various sectors, all reflecting the inclusive nature of Scotland's fintech cluster.

Their contributions truly demonstrate the breadth, expertise and diversity that drives fintech innovation in Scotland and is changing the way we do finance.

Finally, our continued thanks to our friends at VisitScotland for their continued support with the festival and leading the global engagement in showing Scotland is very much open to everyone across the world.

Enjoy the festival.

Nicola Anderson
Chief Executive of FinTech

VisitScotland Business Events are proud to support event organisers like FinTech Scotland, who champion Scotland's key growth sectors. Scotland has hosted some of the world's most prestigious events, and our reputation for delivering memorable events in stunning settings is the envy of the world. Thousands of the world's greatest thinkers, pioneers, innovators and leaders have been welcomed to Scotland through international congresses, conferences and meetings. Our world leading academia, research institutes, industries and innovation centres ensure Scotland is recognised as a global thought leader in many industries, and set Scotland up as the perfect destination to discuss everything from life sciences to satellites. We believe Business events are a catalyst for social and economic transformation; they are a driver to tackle global problems like climate change and access to finance; they give a voice to human rights and shared global standards of decency and respect; they are a leader in the global journey to change.

"We are delighted to once again support the Fintech Scotland Festival, now in its 4th year. The festival is a critical opportunity for our Fintech community to come together to learn, connect and collaborate both virtually and face to face. Scottish Fintech is recognised globally as being at the forefront of emergent technology and applications. From new payment systems, book keeping and personal finance tools, though to charitable giving and creating new models of banking that can be deployed in parts of the world without a traditional banking structure – these technologies can change lives. When you gather, when you meet, talk and learn, we create an opportunity to share new ideas, to learn from others and to create change. As we welcome delegates from over 30 countries to this years festival, we have a chance to export our knowledge and make a difference internationally, and to open our minds and learn from a global community. This is the power of meeting face to face, of seeing eye to eye, this is the opportunity in business events. We wish you all a fantastic festival."

Fintech 2021: Financial Technology Summit
Digit

09:00 – 17:00

📍 Dynamic Earth, Holyrood Rd, Edinburgh EH8 8A

Now in its eighth year, the Fintech Summit has established itself as the largest annual gathering of financial technology leaders in the country, and will serve as the launch event of the Scotland Fintech Festival. The event will be run in a hybrid format, and delegates can attend the physical Summit in Edinburgh, or join online through a full-spec virtual conference platform. The agenda will reflect on a period of significant volatility for the FS community; examining the key trends, challenges, and market disruptions, and discussing the role of Fintech in driving customer innovation and positive socio-economic impact.

How Can FinTech Support the Transition to Net Zero?

The University of Edinburgh

13:00 - 14:00

📍 Technology and Innovation Centre, The University of Strathclyde, 99 George St, Glasgow G1 1RD

Climate FinTech is a relatively new term used to describe that part of FinTech which is targeted at creating products and services that help tackle climate change, in particular through addressing the regulatory needs of carbon reporting.

Our panel, chaired by Dr Luca Taschini, Reader in Carbon Finance, will discuss:

- how technology can analyse the abundant geophysical data to help our understanding of climate exposure and impact
- Investors can be sure that corporate net-zero ambitions are genuine and aligned with global climate goals
- Technology can be used to enable regulators to verify the accuracy of firms' sustainability related disclosures
- The role of the regulator will be central to the discussion, not just in terms of the regulatory requirements (much of Climate Fintech's needs revolve around these) but also its role in fostering innovation in a fast developing market.
